

multytude of people shal go speakyng thus one to another: vp, * let vs go to the hyll of the Lord, & to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye shewe vs his waye, and p we maye walcke in his pathes. For the lawe shal come out of Sion, and the word of the Lorde from Ierusalem, and shal geue sentece amonge the heathen, and shal reforme the multitude of people: They shal breake theyr swerdes also i to mattocks, and theyr speares to make spthes. And one people shal not lyft vp weapen agaynst another, neither shal they learne to fyght from this forth. Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walcke i the lyght of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people & house of Jacob, because they go farre beyonde the east cōtreys i Soiercyres (who they haue as i Philistines had) and i strange chyldren they thinke them selues to haue ynough. Theyr land is full of siluer and gold, neither is there any ende of theyr treasure: Theyr land is also full of horses, & no ede is there of theyr charrets. Theyr lande is also full of bayne goddesses, and before the worke of theyr awne handes haue they bowed the selues, yee, euē before the thinge that theyr awne fyngers haue made. There kneleth the man, there falleth the man downe before the, but the (O Lorde) wilt not leaue them unpunished.

And therfore get the in to some rock, and hyde y in the grounde for feare of the Lorde, and for the glory of his magestye: Which casteth downe the high lookes of presumptuous personnes, and bringeth lowe the pryde of man, and the Lorde only shal be exalted in that daye. For the daye of the Lorde of hostes shal go ouer al pryde and presumptio, vpon all them that exalte them selues, and shal bypunge the all downe: vpon all the hygh and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, & vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all the hygh hylles, and vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, & vpon all stronge walles, vpon all hyppes of Charis, and vpon euery thyng that is glorious and pleasaunt to loke vpon. And it shal bypunge downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumptionne full lowe, and the Lorde shal only haue the vitory in that daye. But the Idols shal utterly be rote out. When shal crepe in to holes of stone, and into caues of the earth, for feare of the Lorde, and for the glory of his magestye: what tyme as he shal arse vp to condemne the earth. Then shal man cast awaye his goddesses of syluer, and his goddesses of gold (which he neuertheles had made to honour them) vnto Holles & Backes: And they shal crepe in to the caues and rockes, & into the clyftes of hard stones, for feare of God, and for the glory of his magestye, when he ryleth to condemne the earth. Feare not ye then any man, whose breth is in hyr nostrils. For what is he of reputacion?

The thyrde Chapter.
The prophecy that at the comyng of Christ all strength and powre shal be put forth of Iherusalem.

In the Lorde God of hostes and Iuda, all possessions & power al meat and dryncke, the captayne and the souldyar, the iudge and prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the prince of syccie peare olde, and the honorable: the Senatours, and men of vnderstandinge: the master of craftes and oratours. And I shal geue the chyldren to be theyr princes, & babes shal haue the rule of you. The people also shal be pyllled and polled, and one shal euer be doyng violence and wronge to another. The bope shal presume agaynst the elder, and the vyle persone agaynst the honorable. Yee, one shal take a frede of his awne kynred by the bolome, and saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalt be our head, for thou mayest kepe vs fro this fall & parell. Then shal he sweare & saye: I cannot helpe you. Moreover, there is neither meat ner clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Ierusalem is ouerthrowne & Iuda must fall to the ground, because that both theyr wordes & counsels are agaynst the Lorde, to prouoke the presence of his magestye vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenance bewa-peth them, yee, they declare theyr awne synnes, the selues, as the Sodomites, & hyde the not. Wo be vnto theyr soules for they haue retourned euill vnto the selues. Byd the ryghteous do well, for they shal enioye the frutes of theyr studies. But wo be to the vngodly and vnyghteous, for they shal be rewarded after theyr workes. Chyldren are extorcioners of my people, and women haue rule of them.

O my people, those that call the blessed decaue the, and depraue the waye of thy foteystepes. The Lorde is rylen vp to comen of the matter, and standeth vp (I saye) to geue iudgement of the people. The Lorde shal come forth to reason with the Senatours and princes of his people. It is ye that haue burnt vp my vineyard, the extorcion done to the poore is i your houses. Wherfore do ye oppresse my people, & marre the faces of the poore? sayeth the Lorde God of hostes. Moreover, they sayth the Lorde: Seing the daughters of Sion are be come so proude, and come in w stretched out neckes and with bayne wanton eyes: seynge they come i tryppynge so nyccly with theyr fete: Therfore shal the Lorde haue the heades of the daughters of Sion, and shal discouer theyr theyr shame. In that daye shal the Lorde take awaye the gorgeousnes of theyr apparell, and spanges, cheynes, partelettes, and colarres, bracelettes and hooues, & goodly floured, wyde and bordered rayment, breeches, and headbandes, rynges and garlandes, holy daye clothes and vales, kercheffes and pinnes, glasses and cypresses, bonettes and taches.

And in steade of good smell, there shalbe stynck amonge the. And for theyr gyddles there shalbe losse bades. And for well sett heare there shalbe baldnesse. In steade of a stomacher, a sack cloth, and for theyr bewty witherdesse, and sonne burnyng. Pourer housbandes and myghtie men shal perishe with the swerde in batayle.

At that tyme shal the gates mourne and complayne, and they shal sytt as desolate folck vpon the earth.

The fourth Chapter.

For want of men, seuen women desyre to haue one man.

When shall seuen wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we wyl laye all our meate and clothynge together in comen, only that we may be called thy wyues, & that this shamefull reprofe maye be taken: fro vs. After that tyme shal the braunche of the Lorde be bewtyfull and myghtye, and the frute of the earth shal be fayre and pleasaunt for those Israelytes that shal lyue therof. Then shal the remnaunt in Sion & the remnaunt at Ierusalem be called holy: Namely all such as are wytted among the lyuynge at Ierusalem: what tyme as the Lorde shal washe awaye the fylthyness of the daughters of Sion, and pource the bloude out from Ierusalem with the wynde of his iudgemente and with fyre. Moreover, vpon all the dwellynge of the hyll of Sion and vpon theyr whole congregacion, shal the Lorde proude a cloude and smoke by daye, & the shynynge of a flammynge fyre by nyght: for all theyr glory shalbe prelerued. And Ierusalem shal be a tabernacle for a shadowe because of hete in the daye tyme a place and refuge where a man maye kepe hym from wether & rayne.

The v. Chapter.

Of Christ and his vineyard, with an execracion of couetousnes and dyoncknes.

Now will I syng my beloued frede a songe of my freddes, because of his vineyard. My beloued frende hath a vineyard in a very frutefull plenteous grounde.

This he hedged, this he walled rounde aboute, and plated it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therein. And afterwarde when he looked that it shulde bypunge his grapes, it brought forth thornes. Now therfore (O ye Cyprians of Ierusalem and whole Iuda:) Iudge I praye you betwixte me, and my vineyard. What more could haue bene done for it that I haue not done? Wherfore then hath it geue thornes, wherfore I looked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, now I shall tell you how I wyl do with my vineyard: I will take the hedge from it, that it maye perishe, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be trode vnder fote. I will laye it waste, that it shal neither be digged nor cut, but beare thornes and briers. I will also forbyd the cloudes that they shal not rayne vpon it. As for the vineyard of the Lorde of hostes it is the house of Israel, and whole Iuda his fayre planting. Of these he looked for equite, but se there is wrong: for ryghteousnesse, lo, it is but mysery.

Wo vnto the that tope one house to another, & bying one lande so nygh vnto another, that the poore can get no more grounde, & ye maye dwel vpon the earth alone. These thynges are i the ears of the Lorde of hostes: shal not many greater & more gorgeous houses be so waste, that no man shal dwell in the? And ten akers of vynes shal geue but a Quarte, and. xxx. bushels of sode shal geue but an Ephah.

Wo be vnto them, that ryse vp early to folowe dyoncknes, and to them that continue so, vntill nyght, & tye they be sett on fyre with wyne. In those copanyes are harpes and lutes, tabzettes & pipes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde, and colyde not the operacion of his hades. Therfore cometh my folk also in to captiuite, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Theyr glory is famished with hunger, and theyr pryde is marred for theyr ste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that theyr pryde, boastyng and welth, with such as reioyse therein, maye descende into it.

Thus hath man a fall, and is brought lowe, and the hygh lode of the proude shalbe layde downe. But the Lorde of hostes is exalted in iudgement, and God that is holy, is prayled in ryghteousnes: Then shal the shepe eate in ordre, and the ryche mens landes that were layde waste, shal straungers deuoure. Wo be vnto the, that drawe wyckednes vnto them with coardes of vanite and synne, as it were with a cart rope.

Which vnto to speake on this maner: let hym make haste now, & go forth with his worke, that we maye se it. Lett the counsell of the holy one of Israel come, and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it.

Wo be vnto them that call euell good, and good euell, which make darchnesse lyght, & lyght darchnesse, that make sowre swete, & swete sowre. Who be vnto them that are wyse in theyr awne lyght, and thynke the selues to haue vnderstandyng. Who be vnto them, that are strong to suppe out wyne and experte men to sett vp dyonckenesse. These geue sentence with the vngodly for rewardes, but comdemne the iust cause of the ryghteous.

Therefore, lyke as fyre lycketh vp the strawe, and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so theyr rote shall be as corruption: and theyr blossom shall vanysh awaye lyke dust: for they haue cast awaye the lawe of the Lord of hostes, & blasphemied the word of the holy maker of Israel. Therefore is the wrath of the Lord kindled also agaynst hys people, and he shaketh his hande at them: pee, he hath smyten, so that the hylls dyd treble. And theyr carcasses dyd lye i the opē streates, lyke myre. And i all thys, the wrath of God hath not recalled, but hys hande is stretched out styll. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: and call vnto the in a farre countre: and beholde, they shall come hastily with speede. There shall not be one faynt nor feeble amonge the, no not a sleggy nor sleper persone. There shall not one of the put of the gyrdle from his loynes, nor lowse theyr lachet of his shooe. Hys arrowes are sharpe, & al his bowes bent. His horse hooves are lyke flynt, & his cartwheles lyke a storme wynde. His crye is as it were of a lyon, and he roareth lyke lyons whelpes. They shall roare, & hantch vp the praye, & no man shall recouer it or get it from the. In that daye they shall be so scarce vpon them, as the see. And yf we looke vnto the lāde, beholde, it shall be all darchnesse & sorowe. If we loke toward heauen: beholde, it shall be darcke.

The vi. Chapter.

Elay sawe the glory of the Lord, and was sent to prophesie the desolacion of Ierusalem.

In the same yere that kinge Oziah dyed, I sawe the Lord sittyng vpon an hygh and glorious seate, & his trayne fylled the temple. And aboute hym stode the Seraphims, wherof euery one had sixe wyges. With twayne eche couered his face, w twayne hys fete, and with twayne dyd he flye. They cried also eche one to ather on thys maner: holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hostes. The whole worlde is full of his glory. Pee, y geastes and dozechetes moued at his cryng, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde, Who is me for I am lost in asmoch as I am a man of vncleane lyppes, & dwell amonge people phath vncleane lyppes also: for myne eyes haue sene the kynge and Lord of hoostes.

Then flew one of the Seraphims vnto me, haupnge a hote cole in his hande, which he had taken from the auter with the tonges, and touched my mouth, and sayde, lo: this hath touched thy lyppes, & thyne vncleane lypes is taken awaye, & thy synne forgiven. Also, I herd the voyce of the Lord saye on this maner: Whom shall I send, and who wyl be oure messenger? Then I sayde: here am I, sende me. And he sayde, go, and tell this people: * ye shall heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: ye shall playnely se, and not perceaue. Harden the harte of this people, stoppe theyr eares, ad shut theyr eyes, that they se not with theyr eyes, heare not with theyr eares, and vnderstand not with theyr hertes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then spake I: Lord, how longe? he answered: vntill the cyties be utterly wasted without inhabitours, & the houses without men, tyll the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lord shall take y men farre awaye, so that the lāde shall lye waste a longe season, yet in yt shall succede .x. kinges, and the lande shall retorne and be lapde waste. And as the terebint tre and oke in winter cast ther leaues, and yet haue ther sappe in them so shall the holy lead continue in theyr substance.

The vii. Chapter.

The Syrians moue batayle agaynst Ierusalem. A byrgyn shall beare a chyld.

It happened in the tyme of Ahaz the sonne of Iotham, which was the sonne of Oziah kynge of Iuda: y* Razin the kynge of Syria, and Bechah y sonne of Romeliah, kynge of Israel: went vnto Ierusalem to beseege it, but Razin was not able to winne ye. Now when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) herde worde therof, y Syria & Ephraim were confederate together: his herte quaked (pee and the hertes also of his people) lyke as whan a tree in the felde is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Elay: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Jafub) at the head of the ouer pole, in the fote path by the fullers grounde, & saye vnto hym, take hede to thy selfe & be styll, but feare not, nether be faynt harted, for these two tayles: y is: for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiosnes of Razin the Syrian and Romelies sonne: because that the kynge of Syria Ephraim and Romelies sonne haue wickedly conspyred agaynst the sayng: We wyl goo vnto agaynst Iuda, bere them, and byrge them vnder vs, and set a kynge there, euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus

For thus sayeth the Lord God therto, It shall not so goo forth, nether come so to passe: for the head cytie of y Siria is Damascus, but the head of Damasc is Razin. And after fyue & threscore yere, shall Ephraim be no more a people. And y chefe cytie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. Yf ye beleue not: it cometh of thys: that ye are vnfaythfull to God. Moreover, God spake once agayne vnto Ahaz, sayinge, requyre a token of the Lord thy God, whether it be toward the depth beneth, or toward the heygth aboue. Then sayd Ahaz: I will requyre none, nether wyl I tempte y Lord. The Lord answered: Then heare to, ye of y house of Dauid: Is it not ynough for you y ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therefore y Lord shall geue you a token: Behold, a byrgyn shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and (y hys mother) shall call his name Emanuel. But ter ad hony shall he eate, y he maye knowe to refuse the euell, and chose the good. For oz euer the chylde come to knowledge, to eschue the euell and chose the good. The lande (that thou so Abhorrest) shall be desolate of both her kynges. The Lord also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, & vpon thy fathers house (soch as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed fro Iuda) thozowe the kynge of the Assyrians. For at y same tyme shall the Lord whysle for the flies that are aboute the water of Egypt, and for the Bees in y Assyrians lāde. These shall come, and shall lyght all in the desolate valeyres, in the holes of stones, vpon all thozyme and bushye places.

At the same tyme shall the Lord shewe the heare of the head and the fete and y beerd cleane of, with the rasoure that he shall hyper beyode the water: namely, with the kynge of the Assyrians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a kowe, and two shepe. Then, because of the aboundaunce of mylke, he shall make butter & eate it. So that euery one which remayneth in the lāde, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, & were solde for a thousande syluerlynges) shall be turned to briers & thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the lande w arrowes & bowes, so shall all the lande be come briers and thornes. And as for al hylls that are hewe downe, ther shall not come vpon the anye feare of briers & thornes. But y catell shall be dryuen thither, and the shepe shall fede there.

The viii. Chapter.

The despueraunce of the lande by Emanuel. A stone of offence, at whiche many shall stumble.

Moreover, the lord sayd vnto me: Take y a greate leaf, & write in it, as men do w a penne, make hastye speede to robbe, & haste to y people. And I called vnto me saythfull witness to recorde. Arphah the prest, & zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that wet I vnto the Prophetisse, y had conceaued & borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lord to me: geue him this name: a spedie robber: an hastie spoiler. For why, oz ouer y chylde shall haue knowledge to crye father, & mother: shall the ryches of Damascus & y substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye by y spoiler, before the kynge of the Assyrians.

The Lord spake also vnto me, sayinge: For so moch as thys people refuseth the still rennyng water of Sylo, and put theyr delpte in Razin & Romelies sonne: Behold, the Lord shall byrge myghtie & greate floudes of water vpon them: namely, the kynge of the Assyrians with all his power: Which shall clyme vp vpon all his floudes, and renne ouer all theyr banckes. And shall breake in vpon Iuda, flowinge & increasig in power, tyll he gett hi by y neck. He shall fyl also the widenesse of thy lande with hys brode winges, Emanuel. Breake downe (o ye peple of Assur) and ye shall be, broke downe: herken to all ye of farre countrees. Muster you, and you shall be broken downe, prepare you to batell and you shall be toyme in pecces: take your counsell together, yet must your counsell come to naught: go in hande withall, yet shall it not prospere: for God is with vs. For the Lord spake thus to me in the powre of his hande, & warned me, sayinge vnto me: that I shulde not walcke in the waye of this people.

He sayde moreover: rounde with none of the, whosoeuer saye: ponder people are bounde together: feare them not, nether be afraid of them, but sanctifie the Lord of hostes, lett hym be your feare and dyede. For he shall be the holy place to flye to, and stone to stumbe at: the rock to fall vpon: a snare and net to both the houses of Israel, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem.

And many shall stumbe, fall, and be broke vpon hym: pee, they shall be snared & taken. Now laye the witness together & seale the lawe w my disciples. Thus wil I wayte vpon the Lord that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I will loke for him. But lo, as for me, and the children which the lord hath geuen me: we are a token and a wondre in Israel, for the Lord of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Sion.

And yf they saye vnto you: aske counsell at the sothelayers, witches, charmers and conurers, then make them thys answer.

Is there

 Luk. xxi.* Is there a people eny where, þat keth not concell at his God?  Shulde me reme vn-* to the dead for þe luynges? If eny mā want lyght, leet hym loke vpo the lawe, and the testimony, whether they speake not after this meanig. If he do not thys, he stoblet and suffreth hunger. And yf he suffre hunger he is out of pacience, and blasphemeth his kyng & his God. Then loketh he vp warde, & downwarde to þe earth, & beholde, the re is trouble and darknesse, veraciō is rounde aboute hym, and the cloude of erroure. And out of such aduersite, shal he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme past, it hath bene well sene, that the lande of zabulon and the lande of Nephtaly (where thozow þe see waue goeth ouer Iordane into the lande of Galilee) was at the fyrst in lytle trouble: but afterwarde soze vered.

The ix. Chapter.

The prophete of the natyue & domynge.

 Isa. xlii.* The people that walke in darckenes haue sene a greate lyght. As for them that dwell in the lande of the shadowe of death, vpon them hath þe lyght shyned. Thou hast multiplyed the people, & not increased theyr toye.  They reioyce before the,* euen as men make mery in haruett, and as men that haue gotten þe victorie, whe they deale the spoyle. For thou hast broken the yoke of þe peoples burthen: the staff of hys shoulder and the rod of hys oppressoure, as in the dayes of Madiān.

And trulie euery batayll þe warryoure accompliseth, is done w consuled nople & defpylge ther garmentes w bloude: But this batayle shal be w burnynge & consu-myng of fyre. For vnto vs a chyld is bone, & vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Vpon hys shoulder doth the kyngdome lye, and he is called w hys awne name: wonderfull. The geuer of coucell, þe myghty God, þe eueraliue father, the prync of peace, he shal make no ende to encrease þe kyngdome & peace, & shal lye vpon the seate of Dauid & in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, & to stabllysh it w equyte and ryghteousnesse, from hēce forth for euermore. Thys shal the gelousy of the Lorde of hostes bynge to passe.

The Lorde sent a worde into Jacob, the same is come into Israel. And all the people of Ephraim shal knowe, and they that dwell in Samaria, þe can saue with pryde and hys stomackes, on this maner. The tyle worcke is fallē downe, but we will buyl-de it w squared stones. The Wolbery tymbre is broke, but we shal sett it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles, þe Lorde shal prepare Razin the enemye agaynst them, and so orde theyr aduersaries, that the Sircans shal laye holde vpon them before, and the Philistynes behynde, and so deuoure Israel with open mouth.

After all thys is not the wrath of þe Lorde ceased, but yet hys hande stretched oute styll. For the people turneth not vnto hym that chastyleth them, nether do they seke the Lorde of hostes. Therefore hath þe Lorde roted oute of Israel both head and tayle, braunche and twigge in one daye.

By the head, is vnderstande the Senatoure and honorable man, and by the tayle the Prophet that preached lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a ryght case, soch be disceauers. Soch as men thynke also to be perfecte among these, are but cast awayes.

Therefore shal the Lorde haue no pleasure in theyr ydge men, nether fauoure theyr fatherlesse & wyddowes. For they are all together pyncytes and wycked, and all theyr mouthes speake foly. After all thys is not þe Lordes wrath ceased, but yet hys hande is stretched oute styll. For vngodlynesse burneth, as a fyre in the byers and thornes. And as it were out of a fyre in a wood or a rede bush, so ascendeth the smoke of theyr pryde.

For cause of the wrath of the Lorde of hostes, is the lande full of darknesse, and the people be consumed, as it were with fy-re, no mā doth spare his brother, but he rob-byth on þe ryght hand: & doth famishe, he eateth on the left hand, and he shal not haue ynough. Euery man shal eate the flesh of his awne arme. Manasses shal eate Ephraim, and Ephraim, Manasses, and they both shal eate Iuda. After all thys is not the Lordes wrath ceased, but yet is hys hande stretched oute styll.

The x. Chapter.

The threatneth the oppressours of the poore, and prophete agaynst Sennacherib.

Whe vnto the þe make vneygh-teous lawes, & deuyse thinges, which be to harde for to kepe: wher thozow the poore are oppressed, on euery syde, and þe in-nocentes of my people robbed of iudgemēt: that wyddowes maye be theyr praye, and that they maye robbe þe fatherlesse. What will ye do in tyme of the visitacion, and whan destruction shal come fro farre? To whom wyll ye runne for helpe? and to whō wyll ye geue your honoure, that he maye kepe it? that when I with drawe my hāde ye come not amonge the presoners, or lye amonge the deed? After all this doth not the wrath of the Lorde cease, but yet is his hande stretched oute styll.

Who be

Who be also vnto Assur, which is a staf of my wrath, in whose hande is the rod of my punysshment. I shal sende hym amonge those pyncyssh people, amonge the people that haue deserued my dysfauours shal I sende hym: that he may utterly robbe the, spoyle the, and treade them downe lyke the myze in þe strete. Howbeit, his meanyng is not so nether thynketh his hert of thys falschyon.
But he ymagineth onely, how he may rote out and destroye moch people, for he sayeth are not my wynges all kynges? Is not Calno as easie to wyne, as Charcha-mis? Is it harder to conuere Hamath then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria? As who say: I were able to wyne the kyngdome of the Idolaters and their goddes: but not Jerusalem & Samaria. Shal I not do vnto Jerusalem & their ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and their ydoles?

Wherefore þe Lorde sayeth: Alas as I haue perfourmed my whole worcke vpon the hyll of Syon and Jerusalem, then wyll I vylet the noble and stoute hart of the kyng of Assyria, with hys proude lookes.
For he standeth thus in his awne conceite: this do I thozowe þe power of myne awne hāde, and thozow my wyldome: For I am wyle, I am he that remoue the lādes of the people: I robbe their treasures: and (lyke one of the worthyes) I dyue them fro their hye scates. My hande hath founde out the stregth of the people, as it were a nest. And lyke as egges, that were layde here and there, are gathered together: So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man, þe darre be so bolde, as to touch a fether, that darre open his mouth, or once whysper.

Shall the axe boast it selfe, agaynst him that he weth therwith? or doth þe sawe make eny braggig agaynst him that ruleth it?
That were eue lyke, as yf the rod dyd exal-te it selfe agaynst him that beareth it: or as though the staff shulde magnifye it selfe, as who saye: it were no wood. Therefore shal þe Lorde of hostes sende hi amonge his fatlinges leanes, & burne vp his glory, as it were w a fyre. But the lyght of Israel shal be that fyre, and his Sanctuary shal be the flamme and it shal kyndle, and burne vp his thoz-nes and byers in one daye, pec all the glory of his woddes and felde shal be consumed with body & soule: And they shal be as an hoost of men, whose standerd bearer fayleth. The trees also of hys felde which remayne, shal be of soch a nobre, that a childe maye tell them.

After that daye shal the remnant of Israel, & soch as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, seke nomore conforste at him that smote the, but with saythfulnesse & treuth shal they trust vnto the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. The remnant, euen the reste-ryte of Jacob, shal conuerte vnto God the myghty one. For though thy people (Israel) be as þe sande of the see, yet shal þe remnant of them conuerte in hym. Perferte is the iudgement of him that floweth in rygh-teousnesse, and therefore the Lorde of hostes shal perfectly fulfyll the thyng, þe hath determined in þe myddest of þe whole worlde Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God of hostes: Thou my people, þe dwellest in Syon, be not afrayed, for þe kyng of the Assyrians: he shal smyte the with a rodd, & shal wagge his staff at the, as the Egypciāns dyd some tyme: But soone after, shal my wrath and myne indignaciō be fulfyllēd i the destruc-cion of them.

Whereouer, the Lorde of hostes shal prepare a scourge for hi, lyke as was þe scourge of Madiā vpon the rock of Oreb. And he shal lyft vp his rodd ouer the see, as he dyd somtyme ouer the Egypciāns. Then shal hys burthen be taken from thy shoulders, and his yoke from thy neck, pec, the same yoke shal be corrupte for very fatnesse.
He shal come to Aiath, and go thozow toward Mygdon: at Mychmas shal he laye vp his harnesse, and go ouer the soorde. Sy-bea shal be their resting place, Rhamah shal be a frayed, Sybea Saul shal lye a-waue. The voyce of þe noyes of thy hoyses (daughter Gallim) shal be herde vnto Lays & to Anathoth, which also shal be in trouble. Madmena shal tremble for feare, but þe citelins of Sabin are manly, yet shal he remayne at Rob þe daye. After that, shal he lyft vp hys hāde agaynst the mount of þe daughter Syon, the hyll of Jerusalem. But se, the Lorde God of hostes shal take awaye the proude from thence, with feare. he shal hewe downe the proude, & fel the hys mynded. The busshe also of þe wood shal he ro-te out with yron, and Lybanus shal haue a myghty fall.

The xi. Chapter.

The prophete of the natyue of Christ and of hys people: of the remnant of Israel, and of the sayth of the heathen or gentyles.

Ad there shal come a rodd forth of the kynd of Isai, and a blofsome shal flourish out of hys rote.
The spryte of þe Lorde shal lyght vpon hym: the spryte of wyldome, and vnderstandyng: þe spryte of counsell, & strength the spryte of knowlege, and of the feare of the Lorde: and shal make hym feruent in the feare of God.

For he shal not geue sentence, after the thyng that shal be brought before his eyes, nether reproue a matter at þe fyrst hearing: but w ryghteousnesse shal he iudge þe poore, and with
