(d) The Commission's order for special reports was not made in the name of the court or in reliance upon judicial powers, but in reliance upon its own law-enforcing powers. P. 643.

2. The order did not violate § 3 (a) of the Administrative Procedure Act. Respondents were put on notice of the possibility of the issuance of such orders by the Commission's Rule XXVI, together with its Statement of Organization, Procedures and Functions, which meet the requirements of that section. Pp. 644–647.

3. The Commission's authority under § 6 of the Act to require special reports of corporations includes special reports of the manner in which they are complying with decrees enforcing cease and desist orders under § 5. Pp. 647–651.

(a) That this use of the Commission's power under § 6 is novel and unprecedented in Commission practice does not require a different result, since power granted to governmental agencies is not forfeited by nonuser. Pp. 647–648.

(b) The language of § 6 is clearly broad enough to authorize the issuance of the order here in question. Pp. 648–649.

(c) The use of information obtained in special reports under § 6 is not limited to support of general economic surveys for the President, the Congress or the Attorney General. It may also be used in determining whether there has been proper compliance with the court's decree under § 5. Pp. 649–650.

(d) The special reports required by the order were of the kind which the Commission is authorized by § 6 to require. P. 650.

(e) The fact that § 5 applies to individuals, partnerships, and corporations, while §§ 6 (b) and 10 apply only to corporations, does not require a different result. Pp. 650–651.

4. The Commission's order does not contravene the Fourth Amendment's proscription of unreasonable searches and seizures or the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment. Pp. 651–654.

(a) Law-enforcing agencies have a legitimate right to satisfy themselves that corporate behavior is consistent with the law and the public interest. P. 652.

(b) If the inquiry is within the authority of the agency, the demand is not too indefinite and the information sought is reasonably relevant, it does not exceed the investigatory power of the Commission. P. 652.

(c) On its face, the Commission's order did not transgress these bounds. Pp. 652–653.

(d) Before the courts will hold an order of the Commission seeking information reports arbitrarily excessive, they may expect
