2. One who pays no regard to the precepts of religion.

They ſay this town is full of couzenage,
As nimble jugglers, that deceive the eye;
Diſguiſed cheaters, prating mountebanks,
And many ſuch like libertines of ſin. Shakeſpeare.

That word may be applied to ſome few libertines in the audience. Collier's View of the Stage.

3. [In law; libertinus, Lat.] A freedman; or rather, the ſon of a freedman.

Some perſons are forbidden to be accuſers on the ſcore of their ſex, as women; others on the ſcore of their age, as pupils and infants; others on the ſcore of their conditions, as libertines againſt their patrons. Ayliffe's Parergon.

LI'BERTINE. adj. [libertin, French.] Licentious; irreligious.

There are men that marry not, but chuſe rather a libertine and impure ſingle life, than to be yoked in marriage. Bacon.

Might not the queen make diligent enquiry, if any perſon about her ſhould happen to be of libertine principles or morals. Swift's Project for Advancement of Religion.

LI'BERTINISM. n. ſ. [from libertine.] Irreligion; licentiouſneſs of opinions and practice.

That ſpirit of religion and ſeriouſneſs vaniſhed all at once, and a ſpirit of liberty and libertiniſm, of infidelity and profaneneſs, ſtarted up in the room of it. Atterbury's Sermons.

LI'BERTY. n. ſ. [liberté, French; libertas, Latin.]

1. Freedom, as oppoſed to ſlavery.

My maſter knows of your being here, and hath threatened to put me into everlaſting liberty, if I tell you of it; for he ſwears, he'll turn me away. Shakeſpeare.

O liberty! thou goddeſs, heav'nly bright!
Profuſe of bliſs, and pregnant with delight,
Eternal pleaſures in thy preſence reign. Addiſon.

2. Freedom, as oppoſed to neceſſity.

Liberty is the power in any agent to do, or forbear, any particular action, according to the determination, or thought of the mind, whereby either of them is preferred to the other. Locke.

As it is in the motions of the body, ſo it is in the thoughts of our minds: where any one is ſuch, that we have power to take it up, or lay it by, according to the preference of the mind, there we are at liberty. Locke.

2. Privilege; exemption; immunity.

His majeſty gave not an intire country to any, much leſs did he grant jura regalia, or any extraordinary liberties. Davies.

Their pinions ſtill
In looſe librations ſtretch'd, to truſt the void
Trembling refuſe. Thomſon's Spring.

2. [In aſtronomy.]

Libration is the balancing motion or trepidation in the firmament, whereby the declination of the ſun, and the latitude of the ſtars, change from time to time. Aſtronomers likewiſe aſcribe to the moon a libratory motion, or motion of trepidation, which they pretend is from eaſt to weſt, and from north to ſouth, becauſe that, at full moon, they ſometimes diſcover parts of her diſk which are not diſcovered at other times. Theſe kinds are called, the one a libration in longitude, and the other a libration in latitude. Beſides this, there is a third kind, which they call an apparent libration, and which conſiſts in this, that when the moon is at her greateſt elongation from the ſouth, her axis being then almoſt perpendicular to the plane of the ecliptick, the ſun muſt enlighten towards the north pole of the moon ſome parts which he did not before, and that, on the contrary, ſome parts of thoſe which he enlightened towards the oppoſite pole are obſcured; and this produces the ſame effect which the libration in latitude does. Dict. Trev.

Thoſe planets which move upon their axis, do not all make intire revolutions; for the moon maketh only a kind of libration, or a reciprocated motion on her own axis. Grew.

LI'BRATORY. adj. [from libro, Lat.] Balancing; playing like a balance.

LICE, the plural of louſe.

Red bliſters riſing on their paps appear,
And flaming carbuncles, and noiſome ſweat,
And clammy dews, that loathſome lice beget;
Till the ſlow creeping evil eats his way. Dryden's Virg.

LI'CEBANE. n. ſ. [lice and bane.] A plant.

LICENSE. n. ſ. [licentia, Latin; licence, French.]

1. Exorbitant liberty; contempt of legal and neceſſary reſtraint.

Some of the wiſer ſeeing that a popular licence is indeed the many-headed tyranny, prevailed with the reſt to make Muſidorus their chief. Sidney.

Taunt my faults
With ſuch full licence, as both truth and malice
Have power to utter. Shakeſp. Ant. and Cleopatra.

They baul for freedom in their ſenſeleſs moods,
And ſtill revolt when truth would ſet them free;
Licence they mean, when they cry liberty. Milton.

The privilege that ancient poets claim,
Now turn'd to licenſe by too juſt a name. Roſcommon.

Though this be a ſtate of liberty, yet it is not a ſtate of licence; though man, in that ſtate, have an uncontroulable liberty to diſpoſe of his perſon or poſſeſſions, yet he has not liberty to deſtroy himſelf. Locke.

2. A grant of permiſſion.

They ſent ſome to bring them a licence from the ſenate. Judith xi. 14.

Thoſe few abſtract names that the ſchools forged, and put into the mouths of their ſcholars, could never yet get admittance into common uſe, or obtain the licence of publick approbation. Locke.

We procured a licence of the duke of Parma to enter the theatre and gallery. Addiſon on Italy.

3. Liberty; permiſſion.

It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accuſed have the accuſers face to face, and have licence to anſwer for himſelf. Acts.

To LI'CENSE. v. a. [licencier, French.]

1. To ſet at liberty.
